A FEMALE SMUGGLER.

WHAT CUSTOM HOUSE INSPECTOR. MRS. ELLIS CAPTURED YESTERDAY.

That women are the most adroit smugglers is a fact conceded in all lands possessing Custom House officers. In our large scaports they have female examiners, and, as women are believed to have but little love for each other as a rule, it is no wonder that the female inspectors, in addition to the pleasure of fulfilling their duties as customs officers, take pleasure in detecting a Hoboken steamship wharves of the German line Mrs. Ellis, one of these inspectors, is stationed. Yesterday staff of inspectors from the Barge office boarded the Hamburg steamship Hermann in the Bay. When the vessel arrived at the wharf at Hoboken and the inspectors had completed the labor of preparing the declarations of passengers, the gang-plank was run the declarations of passengers, the gang passes was taken out to the shore. Among the first to go ashore was Mr. Nichols, who went up to Mrz Ellis and said, "Now keep a bright look out on the women passengers." This she promised to do, and the General attended to the administering of oaths. Shortly afterward the bright little woman sidded up to him and said, "You see that lady," pointing to a woman standing on the wharf.

"she can't sit down."

Truly enough, the woman did look tired and weary, and Mrs. Ellis had noticed that she had made several abortive efforts to reat herself by sitting down, but had halted half way and stood up straight once more. General Nichols then said to Mrs. Ellis, "Look after and overhaul her." The female insepector then went to the fatigned beauty and asked her to disrobe. She pouted and refused, and wanted to know whether this was a free country or not, whether a woman was to be outraged in this fashion. But little Mrs. Ellis was indexible and pittless, and the undressing commenced, Mrs. Mary Lindlaw, for that was the amuggler's name, vainly protesting. Mrs. Ellis soon found that her prisoner's underdress was covered with smuggled hair. The bair was of many that, golden hair, hair black as a raven's wing, sparking auburn, carrotty hair and brown hair, the value of the smuggled goods being about $2,000. When relieved of her booty Mrs. Lindlaw said, "You are welcome to it, madame. I was only bringing it over for a human hair dealer in Broadway—I don't lose a cent." The goods are now at the Seizure Room of the Custom House. The duty on human hair is forty per cent ad valorem.

ANOTHER SEIZURE. Deputy Surveyor' General Nichols, and Custom House Inspector Richard Egan, also made a handsome

House Inspector Richard Egan, also made a handsome seizure on board the Hamburg steamship Herder, aided by the intrepid little Mra. Ellis, above mentioned. The seizure consisted of about 225 meerschaum cigar holders, of the most exquisite workmanship. A large portion of them were concealed in the clothing of a passenger named Morwitz, while a number of them were captured by the Customs Inspector of the gentler sex, above mentioned in the petticoats, bustle, &c. of Frau Morwitz. The articles are now in the seizure room of the Custom House. They are estimated to be worth about $2,500.

STOPPING SMUGGLING. The duties collected on board the Bothnia, of the Cunard line, last week, from 164 passengers, amounted to $3.500.
